DALLAS BALL TEAM COMING HERE; BOXING BOUTS AROUSE INTEREST

Baseball Tournament Gets the Shelf, But a Big Series With Texas League All-Stars, Strengthened By Tris Speaker and Morton, Arranged; Whole Quaker Regiment To Attend Boxing Bouts Monday.

BY "BECK."

BASEBALL fans are to have a treat during the International Soil Products exposition in this city. The committee named by the chamber of commerce to arrange for a baseball tournament of southwestern teams met on Thursday evening at the office of Dr. T. J. McCann. It was explained that while the chamber had named the committee and had also indicated that there would be funds forthcoming for purses, it had since been ascertained that the funds would not be available. Consequently, it didn't take five minutes for the meeting to discard absolutely the plans of the chamber of commerce and to get down to a consideration of a real baseball series.

Manager Joe Gardner, of the Dallas team of the Texas league, had sent a proposition to Dr. McCann to bring an all-star team here for a series of games with the pick of the local players, strengthened by a few professionals. This was the best proposition available, according to those present at the meeting, and it was decided to accept the Dallas proposition. Manager Gardner sent word that he would have Tris Speaker, the famous player of the Cleveland Indians, and pitcher Guy Morton with his all-star team and that the other players would be taken from the Dallas and other clubs of the Texas league. It was suggested that Hayden might also send his team here and if this should be done, arrangements will be made to take care of Hayden in the way of games.

May Bring Big League.

Dr. McCann expressed the belief that if Speaker comes here, he would see the great natural advantage of El Paso as a spring training camp for the Cleveland club.

Tickets for the series of games, which will open on October 14 and close October 25, will be placed on sale at once. It is hoped that the series will be a success and that the funds through the sale of these season tickets to meet the necessary guarantee for the Texas league. Fans who desire to cooperate can secure tickets from Dr. T. J. McCann, E. P. Hughes at the F. J. Feldman company or through the sport departments of the local papers.

It has been about decided to give El Paso fans some wrestling during the big exposition. The exact date has not been set yet but a bout will probably be staged on Wednesday night, October 17, between Ad Smith, of San Francisco, the lightweight champion of the world, and Billy Hawk, now making his home at Mills, N. M., but who gained his last experience in the east, where he met all the real stars of the mat game, including Joe Stecher.

Terms for this match have been offered both wrestlers, who have been hurling challenges at each other for the past two months, and it is likely that acceptance will be here within a few days.

The winner of the army featherweight championship bout at Camp Cotton, Tex., on Monday evening of next week is not going to lack for offers of other bouts. The sporting editor of The Herald has been authorized by two different southwestern clubs to offer dates to the winner for matches early in October. The winner of the bout will also take down 50 percent of the purse, which will be no inconsiderable amount, as the Camp Cotton bouts are drawing big crowds.

Big Crowd For Boxing.

The local fans appreciate clean, fast boxing, such as is now being put on in the arena of the 23rd infantry. The officials patronized the local bouts very liberally while the advance sale for the Monday night card indicates that the civilian attendance will be about double that of the first bout.

Out at Camp Stewart, the boxing fans are preparing to come to the bouts in large numbers. There will be a special train to accommodate the fight fans from the Pennsylvania division and it may be necessary for a second train to be added. Livingston is a member of the Second Pennsylvania infantry and practically every member of that regiment will be in the arena to root for their candidate. It is also planned to bring the regimental band and make a real demonstration for such a thing as a possible defeat for Tommy has not entered the heads of the militiamen from the Keystone state.

Herald will also have a big delegation from the 20th infantry to root for him. He is a corporal in the machine gun company of that regiment and it is likely that he will have the backing of all the regular army men while the national guards will string along with Livingston.

Fast Preliminaries Promised.

Chaplain Chennard, of the 23rd infantry, states that the preliminary card will be quite up to the high standard set on Labor day night and that the

THIRD STRAIGHT WIN FOR 23D INF.

Fifth Artillery Defeats Eighth Cavalry in Second Contest

By TOM CLEMENTS.

The 23d U. S. Infantry won their second game of this week when they cleaned up on the Rhode Island Field artillery 18 to 6 in the Army league series at Rio Grande park on Thursday. "Lefty" Smith, of the infantry, held the artillerymen to two hits, and with the good support of the entire field never gave them a look at third.

The Rhode Islanders played hard, but they still need lots of practice, and although manager Jeffers shuffled his team around quite a bit, it did not do much good. Lefty started pitching, but was knocked out of the box before the end of the first inning. McLeod then tried it, but he also was forced out after about three more innings.

Nelson was finally taken from short and put in and he finished the game. The best pitcher of the team is at present on a furlough and this, besides the fact that several of the speed players are in the hospital, puts the team to some disadvantage.

Francis, playing first for the 23d, was forced to quit the game in the third inning, when he was hurt sliding home. He is believed to have shattered a bone in his right leg, and was immediately taken to the hospital.

Second Game Is Close.

The second game of the day was one of the best of the present Army league series, resulting finally in the defeat of the Eighth cavalry by the Fifth Field artillery, 5 to 4. In the early innings it was rather dull, but in the last two or three innings the teams came to life and the play was fast and snappy. Bonhomie, by several of the artillerymen in the second inning, lost them several runs, and might have cost them the game, before they seemed to learn that two or three men couldn't occupy the same base at one time.

A rally by the Eighth in the fifth inning brought them three runs, and another in the seventh started by bringing them one, but they were both "quenched" in time to save the artillery. Bentley and Vidmer came to the rescue in the fifth inning and relieved Heyder and Botham as batters, and this also helped to make the game faster, but it was not in time to save the day for the cavalry. ## FIGHT GAME GRIPS AUSTRALIANS; PEOPLE GOOD JUDGES OF BOXERS

The following article was dictated by the Australians (that they have become, perhaps, the most editorial—and the most expert—judges of fighters in the world. And so a referee who doesn't watch every move of the fighters and who fails to render absolutely fair verdicts finds himself very unpopular.

One of the most important fights, with the most thrilling aftermath, I ever decided was the one that marked the first important appearance of Len Darcy in Sydney. Darcy had made a great reputation among the "small fry" fighters in the smaller towns. Then he was matched with Fritz Holland, an American, and I was named as referee.

Almost the whole town of New Castle came to see its idol in action, and it bet heavily that Darcy would be the victor. But Darcy, in that fight, although showing remarkable promise, put up a rather "green" exhibition. Holland wasn't a wonder, but in that battle he showed he was a bit better than Len. And so when the 20th round was over, and while the huge crowd howled "You win, Len," I did the only fair thing to do—I placed my hand on Holland's head and so awarded to him the victory.

It shocked the crowd. It was a rude shock to the judgment of the crowd. It went mad and proceeded to generally dismantle the building. I discreetly made my exit. New Castle coal miners, especially when they are in a body and are a bit vexed, are not the sort of persons that stop to listen to reason. I sheltered in a little office in the stadium, hiding behind a huge desk which protected me from missiles that came hurtling through the windows.

The mob, in its frenzy, at last tried to turn down the building. It was fired out, we got a bomb, extinguished the flames quickly and then turned it upon the mob. That had the immediate effect of cooling its ardor and the danger passed.

A Funny Knockout.

One of the funniest "knockouts" I have ever seen was in a fight I refereed which brought together one of the Sydney fighters and a highly touted Frenchman named Marchant. He came to Australia billed as a great "Knock 'em out" fighter—but he developed into an awful joke.

On the night of the fight under discussion, Marchant's one thought seemed to be to get out of the way of the other man's blows. For several rounds he succeeded—then he ran into a jabber, immediately Marchant flopped, although the blow did not carry any flooring power.

As Marchant fell he stumbled over the ropes. As a result, the lower part of his body hung outside the ring; the other part inside. And then I began to count him out.

When I reached "five" Marchant
